PRODUCTIVE FRUIT TREES.

A small mulated Baldwin apple tree, set about seventeen years ago, was cultivated for several years with corn, and after was sold to grass. It then remained a monstrosity for some years, while maturing. It was next plowed and planted with corn, but mostly with thick stalks, corn holder, occasionally receiving a moderate dressing of manure. The crop was removed in autumn to make way for the following year. The tree is now well branched, with many small branches, which was plowed under late in the following spring in time to save even tender foliage. This treatment has now been given for three or four years, and the character of the fruit has become quite changed. In a few of bearing small crops as formerly, it now gives fine heavy crops. From a few of the trees (measuring thirteen inches in diameter) twenty-four bushels each of handsome Baldwin were gathered the present autumn, but these bore last year. Some trees which gave abundant crops last year, bore moderately again the present year—these were never measured than the rest. The treatment which this orchard has received, with the results, shows plainly the superiority of cultivation, and especially of mowing over that of entire neglect. The fact is, that the table raw prevents its therapeutic powers from being known. The celery should be cut into little, boiled in water until soft, and the water drunk by the patient. Serve warm with pieces of toasted bread, and the patient will soon feel better. Such is the declaration of a physician who has again and again tried the experiment, and with uniform success. At least two-thirds of those named "heart-diseases" are ascribed to rheumatism and its agonizing ally, gout. Small-pox, so much dreaded, is not half so destructive as rheumatism, which it is maintained by many physicians, can be prevented by obeying nature's laws. Here in Gettysburg we boil the root and stalks, as the root is the principal part of it, and afterwards eat it as a salad with oil and vinegar. I received such immediate benefit from this that I am anxious to let all the rheumatic sufferers know of it.

Soon after planting the above-mentioned orchard, or a few years later, an acre or more was set with standard Apple pear trees. The ground was dry upland, of moderate fertility, and for some years was cultivated with corn fodder. Up to the present time it has had but one dressing of manure, but has been enriched by plowing in green crops. Three seasons ago it was sown heavily with rye, and the crop plowed just as the heads were appearing. The next year clover was sown with the second crop of rye. A heavy crop of clover was the result, but being prostrated by a storm, it was allowed to rot on the ground. Last spring the whole was plowed under, and the soil planed with corn. This continued treatment has had an excellent effect on the pear trees, and the Anjou, although this variety is reputed a moderate bearer, were seen bearing under their heavy loads of fruit. Two of them, as examples, had the crops carefully measured, and were found to give eight bushels each. The trees measured about eight inches in diameter, with twelve feet spread of the branches. Although bearing so copiously, the size of the pears was not reduced, a large portion of them measuring three inches both vertical and cross-diameter.—Country Gentleman.

HOW TO PLANT WALNUT TREES.

I wish to give a little lieve of valuable information in regard to a subject which daily comes under my observation—that of making a success of growing walnut timber. A great many in the spring and fall of each year procure the nuts for planting purposes. At the very outset of the emigration to Dakota, when hands were given away under contract compelling each an every one to grow timber, there had been a greater demand for the black and for the white walnut than any other varieties, and in the future the wood will be very valuable. Those who are familiar with the black walnut know that the nut, when it falls from the tree, is closely enveloped by its own hull, the whole being three times the size of the nut when it is cracked. This covering is of a tough, fungus-like substance, which, if allowed to remain on the ground, absorbs the moisture from dews, frost, rain or snow. It is furthermore covered by the falling leaves. The shell of the nut itself being so very hard, requires by nature this damp casing in order to open the nut and allow the kernel to perform its duty—to sprout and grow. Knowing that many have purchased the nuts as they are properly cleaned of their husks for market, and having planted them in the ground, one would plant corn, have made a failure, as it would grow in both directions—hating the ground. The trees can be propagated successfully. Trees grown in this State that are associated with new measure eighteen inches in the trunk with twenty years' growth. As the soils of Nebraska and Dakota are claimed to be as rich as those of Illinois, no doubt a larger growth may be had. Of the butternut I have little to say, as I never thought much of it for timber purposes. Many admire the nut for eating, and not long since a gentleman left an order with a Chicago firm for 3,000 to 5,000 bushels for the purpose of utilizing the same in the manufacture of household articles, that are very unique. I would strongly recommend the procuring of nuts in their own hull, with the expectation of securing the very best results. The day is not distant, in this country when nuts of all kinds will become scarce, and in order to keep up a supply the nut bearing tree must be reproduced.—Chicago Tribune.

CURE RHEUMATISM WITH CORTISY.—A German correspondent of an English paper writes as follows: I have had a severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism, and was healed in two days by a soup made of the stalks and root of celery; therefore I desire to make this simple remedy known through the columns of your valuable paper, for the benefit of all sufferers from gout or rheumatism of any form. I was induced to try it by seeing the following notice: Numero is cure of rheumatism by the use of celery have recently been announced in English papers. New discoveries—or what claim to be discoveries of the healing virtues of plants are continually being made. One of the latest is that celery is a cure for rheumatism; indeed, it is asserted the disease is impossible if the vegetable be cooked and freely eaten. The fact is that it always goes out of the table raw prevents its therapeutic powers from being known. The celery should be cut into little, boiled in water until soft, and the water drunk by the patient. Serve warm with pieces of toasted bread, and the patient will soon feel better. Such is the declaration of a physician who has again and again tried the experiment, and with uniform success. At least two-thirds of those named "heart-diseases" are ascribed to rheumatism and its agonizing ally, gout. Small-pox, so much dreaded, is not half so destructive as rheumatism, which it is maintained by many physicians, can be prevented by obeying nature's laws. Here in Gettysburg we boil the root and stalks, as the root is the principal part of it, and afterwards eat it as a salad with oil and vinegar. I received such immediate benefit from this that I am anxious to let all the rheumatic sufferers know of it.

THE STRONG ATTACHMENT OF SUBSCRIBERS.

To a well-conducted newspaper is fully confirmed by publishers. "Stop my paper!" words of dread to beginners in business, lose their terror after a paper has been established for a term of years. So long as a paper pursues a just, honorable and judicious course, meeting the wants of its customers, in all respects, the ties of friendship between the subscribers and the paper are as strong as by a bond forged by a trusty party as a link which binds old friends in business or social life. Occasional defects and errors in a newspaper are overlooked by those who have become attached to it through its personal for years. They sometimes become dissatisfied with it on account of something which has slipped into its columns, and may stop taking it; but the absence of the familiar sheet, at homes and offices for a few weeks becomes an insupportable privation, and they hasten to take it again, and postively apologize for having it stopped. No friendship on earth is more constant than that contracted by the reader for a journal which makes an honest and earnest effort to merit its continued support. Hence a conscientiously conducted paper becomes a favorite in the family.

WHAT IS IT?

A strictly vegetable preparation, composed of a choice and skillful combination of Nature's best remedies. The discoverer does not claim a cure for all diseases, but boldly avows it cures every form of disease arising from a tonsil, liver, lung, impure blood, disordered kidneys, and where there is a broken down condition of the System, requiring a prompt and permanent tonic, it never fails to restore the sufferer. Such is BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. Sold by all druggists, who are authorized by the manufacturers to refund the price to any purchaser who is not benefited by their use.
